At ten minutes after midnight a dispatch was sent to Vice President Arthur from the members of the Cabinet, informing him of the death of President Garfield, and advising him to take the oath of office as President of the United States without delay. Gen. Arthur received the dispatch at 12:30 o'clock, at his residence, 123 Lexington Ave., New York City. In Washington, the unfeigned and reverential grief shown upon every face "marked the picture with shadings that years cannot efface from the memory of those who stood about the bier of the dead President." His remains were escorted from the train at Washington to the Capitol by a procession of military and other organizations through crowded, silent streets. The casket was placed upon the catafalque in the rotunda prepared for its reception and the face exposed to view. The remains will lie there in state until to-night, when the funer-
